DETAILS

Vsevolod Mironov is the featured artist of the current solo exhibition at Centrepoint, the largest English speaking community organization in Basel.

The art exhibition is open from January 4th to March 11th during the regular opening hours of Centrepoint (Im Lohnhof 8, next to the Musik Museum entrance). Visiting the exhibition is free and open to everyone.

Russian artist Vsevolod Mironov begins with a photograph, but he transforms it into an entirely different final piece of art using digital tools and digital printing techniques. His works are multi-dimensional and express complex uncertainty. They are vibrant, playfully complicated and sometimes psychedelic.

Since 2002, Centrepoint has offered its centrally located premises to artists living in Basel and the surrounding areas. It is an additional way for the international community of Centrepoint to contribute to the (already rich) cultural life of Basel.

This is also the personal story of Vsevolod Mironov. Most of his life Vsevolod lived in Russia, graduated from Saint-Petersburg State University (mathematical and mechanical faculty) in the department of computer science. After then graduating from business school, he worked in the pharmaceutical industry. He now lives in Basel with his wife, working on his photography projects.

"What do we really see, while looking at these images? Do they create the same feelings each time or something very different depending on the time or who's observing them? are some of questions Vsevolod Mironov asks through his works.
