DETAILS

The German painter Volker Bessel is the artist featured in the upcoming solo exhibition at Centrepoint, the largest English speaking community in Basel. The exhibition will be on view at Centrepoint during normal opening hours from Sept. 1st to the 20th of October, 2018. Visiting the exhibition is free and open to everyone. "What is left when everything geographically specific to this view is let go? What is elemental to the landscape?" these are the main questions that lead Volker Bessel in his painting. Volker Bessel is a patient and keen observer of nature and has honed his chosen craft of painting for more than 40 years alongside his work as an interior designer. In this exhibition on the Artwall at Centrepoint, - the artist displays both his perception of the external image as well as his reduction to the internal image, executed in watercolors and acrylics respectively. "Seeing and perceiving are not the synonymous. Seeing is how the eye processes the external while perceiving is how that sight is processed internally. In this way processes the external while perceiving is how that sight is processed internally. In this way, my sense perceptions pass through my hands and are brought onto paper" Later in the studio, the Bessel's reduction to the internal image happens when the original –landscape meaning, the landscape left to itself, is finally revealed "It is the horizon, the sky (the firmament), the vegetation, the earth." says the artist. Born in Germany, Bessel relocated to Riehen many years ago and has shown his artwork regularly in both Switzerland and Germany
